MEN STILL ELUDE PURSUIT

Farmers Armed with Shotgun,
Rifles Comb Delta Section,
Guards on Highways

SACRAMENTO, April 25. Losses of resolute farmers, armed with shotguns and rifles, today took charge of the man-hunt in the river delta section for Joe Tanko and Floyd Hall, desperate San Quentin fugitives, to enable police to concentrate their forces on a house-to-house search for the bandits in Sacramento.

A thorough search of houses in the city where it is possible the men might be harbored by confederates was ordered by Captain of Detectives William Hallman, who declared that the sudden disappearance of the desperadoes after each of their daring crimes strongly indicates that they have a secret rendezvous which has escaped detection.

Assistance in the chase from the armed residents of the Sacramento River delta came unsolicited but was promptly accepted as it made possible the centralization of police activities in Sacramento and territory immediately adjacent to the city.

"Every farmer in the delta district is armed and prepared to give battle in case of a meeting with the convicts," said Detective Hallman tonight, "and we feel perfectly secure in allowing them complete supervision of the hunt in that section."

"The ferrymen are also armed and guards have been stationed on the highways and at other important points. The farmers are aroused over the succession of cold-blooded crimes perpetrated by these men and they are acting in defense of their families."

REPORT SOUGHT ON HARBOR HERE

The chief of engineers of the War Department has requested Major J. W. N. Schulz, government engineer in charge of rivers and harbors for this district, to make an immediate report on Richmond harbor in regard to allotting funds for further improvement work, it was learned by City Manager J. A. McVittie yesterday.

In the communication received by McVittie, Major Schulz stated that he desired information immediately from the city manager as to the program of the city in putting through inner harbor development, and he will wait the report before making his recommendation to the chief of engineers.

Schulz requests the following information from McVittie:

1. What class of craft and class of commerce will pass over the new wharf when completed?
2. How soon after the new wharf is completed will commerce pass over it, and in what volume?

CARPENTER INJURED

A deep cut on the cheek, a fracture of the right wrist, and a badly torn nose was sustained yesterday by Walter Sacchi, 3605 Grove street, Oakland, when he fell from the scaffolding on the house which is being constructed in the Pullman district by James Walker, contractor who employs the injured man. Sacchi was taken to the Emergency hospital where he was attended by Dr. L. St. John Hely.

King Boris, Endangered by Assassins and Members Cabinet Who Escaped in Cathedral Bomb Outrage

In the center of the above group is King Boris of Bulgaria. He was fired on by communist assassins while in his automobile near Sofia and one of the bullets came so close that it clipped off part of his mustache. In civilian clothes at the king's right is Dr. Alexander Tankoff, the Premier, who was slightly injured when a bomb exploded in the Sveti Kral Cathedral in Sofia, killing 150 persons who were attending funeral services for General Georgiev. He had been assassinated in the streets of Sofia. At the extreme right is Gen. Youkoff, Minister of War, who also was in the cathedral at the time.

MAN'S BODY IS FOUND ON ROCKS

While searching for the owner of the wearing apparel found late Friday night, Officer E. D. Henry found the body of Wilfred Henderson, 35-year-old insurance man of 6455 Colby street, Oakland, lying on the rocks near the old Shrimp camp at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. Worry over financial matters is believed to have caused Henderson to commit suicide.

Three notes were found in the pockets of the coat, which with a vest and hat was found hanging on an old plow Friday night by Arthur Goodwin, 4221 West avenue, Oakland, who is employed by the Standard Oil company. A watch, fountain pen, and several revolver shells were also found in the coat. The notes eliminated the theory of foul play, as they clearly indicated that Henderson was contemplating suicide. One note was in the nature of a will and was addressed to his wife, Mrs. Catherine G. Henderson, 6456 Colby street, Oakland. It hid her farewell and bequeathed her all his effects, including a $2,000 life insurance policy. He regretted that he possessed nothing more to leave to his brothers and sisters. That he was in full possession of his faculties was stated in the note.

The address of R. R. Henderson, his brother, at the Berkeley Elks club, was the sole contents of the second note, while the third was sealed and has not been opened. It too was addressed to his wife. When found, Henderson was lying on the rocks, some distance from where his clothing was found. It is believed the tide had gone out and left him on the shoals. The gun which the man is believed to have used has not been found by the authorities.

Coroner C. F. Donnelly took charge of the body, which is at the Wilson and Kratzer chapel. The grief-stricken wife was at the chapel yesterday morning to view the remains. Funeral services will be held in Berkeley.

HENDERSON'S brother declared he could attribute no motive to the act, as the dead man always appeared in good health and spirits.

LOCAL MAN WINS ORPHEUM PRIZE

A. Gleeson, 236 Fourteenth street, Richmond won first prize in the title contest conducted the past week by the Oakland Orpheum theatre, for the best title suggested for Elliott Dexter's playlet, without a name.

"Tangled Threads," the title suggested by A. Gleeson, was selected as the prize winning title, according to announcement made yesterday by the judges who had examined some 1,500 suggestions from those who participated in the title contest.

Gleeson was presented with a check for $25 on the Oakland Orpheum stage last night. Second prize went to E. M. Sheldon, an employee of the Associated Oil company of Orem, and he was presented with a check for $15. Sheldon's suggestion was "Adrift."

Third prize was won by Miss Margaret Harich, 3000 Fifty-eighth avenue, Oakland, with "Father Love." The judges were Elliott Dexter, star of the playlet, Wood Soanes, Oakland dramatic critic, and Cecil De Mille.

30-YEAR HOTEL CONTRACT HERE IS SIGNED UP

Charles B. Hamilton Signs Contract to Operate Richmond Hotel 30 Years

HAMILTON HOTEL CHAIN

Lessor Believes Community Hotel Here Will Be a Great Profit Producer

That Richmond's new community hotel will be operated in a first class manner was assured yesterday when Charles B. Hamilton, president of the Hamilton Hotel Chain, signed a contract with the Richmond Community Hotel company. Incorporated, to lease the new hotel on a profit-sharing basis for a period of thirty years. The terms of the lease had been agreed upon for some time but not until yesterday was the transaction definitely closed by the signing by both parties of the necessary papers.

The securing of the Hamilton chain is considered a great stroke of good fortune for the local hotel which will place it in a well known chain and assure it the same type of service maintained in the other Hamilton hotels. Hamilton is the successful hotel operator of many years' experience which started in the middle west and has a record for always operating first-class hotels on a paying basis. The present hotels in the Hamilton chain are: the Hotel Fresno at Fresno, the Tegeler, at Bakersfield, the Gateway at Needles and the Reynolds at Riverside. The Hamilton chain is also to operate the new half million dollar hotel at Bakersfield, and is being sought by other cities throughout the state to add additional units to this chain. Hamilton stated, while in this city last week, that it is the policy of his company to add no hotel to their chain, however fine it may be, unless they are absolutely sure that the hotel in question can be a profit producer.

The lease which the Hamilton chain has signed for Richmond's new hotel provides that they will make no profit until all expenses of operation have been paid including fixed charges such as taxes, insurance, upkeep and interest on indebtedness as well as paying the 7 per cent to the preferred stockholders. Then the remaining net profit is split evenly by them with the owning company, this surplus being available for distribution as dividends on the common stock when declared.

All phases of the hotel program are being rapidly worked out looking to the organization and carrying through of a financing program. The officers of the new corporation are: E. M. Downer, president; Chas. S. Renwick, vice-president; H. A. Johnston, treasurer and Guy Wolf, secretary; T. H. Delany is attorney for the company. All affairs pertaining to the campaign will be handled by the executive committee which has for the time absorbed the officers and directors of the corporation and will be in direct charge of the financing program.

Woman Who Acted As Drummer Boy In Army Attends Hall Dedication

The new Veterans' Memorial hall in Twelfth street was dedicated yesterday afternoon before a large crowd with the most fitting ceremonies possible.

City Attorney D. J. Hall made the dedication speech for the park on behalf of the city, in which he told in a short but well chosen speech of the significance of the park.

Mrs. Glad, of Oakland who is the only woman in California who has the distinction of belonging to the Grand Army of the Republic, played the same drum she used as a pseudo drummer boy in the Civil War, under General Grant, Mrs. Glad enlisted as a drummer when she was but ten years of age, and served in the army from 1862 for three years, until 1865.

The dedication speech for the hall itself was made by Rev. Paul Litree, member of the Episcopal church of Oakland. Litree was one of the early commanders of the American Legion post of Richmond and was the first chairman of the committee on the building of the Memorial hall. He dwelt on the significance of the building—a living memorial to those who gave their lives for their country.

A foretold address on "Co-operation Between the Community and the Veterans" was given by Leo Daze, department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He also touched briefly on the work of the veterans in regard to boys, and said that every post should get behind the boy program in the community and assist in every way possible the encouragement of this movement.

The presentation by James F. Hoey, exalted ruler of the Elks lodge, and the raising of the flag presented by them was one of the most impressive features of the ceremonies. The flag was raised by a detail of uniformed veterans. The Municipal band furnished military and patriotic music throughout the dedication. Charles F. Donnelly and H. H. Mylander rendered vocal numbers with Dennis Shaw accompanying them at the piano. The building was thrown open to inspection after the unveiling of a plaque on the front of the Memorial hall, containing the words dedicating the hall to all veterans of all United States wars.

A. F. Browning, first commander of the Richmond post of the American Legion, ably presided over the ceremonies.

The first dance ever held in the Memorial hall was given last night by Honor Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. This was the third annual dance of the post and the committee which has been working so hard for the past few weeks on the affair felt they were amply repaid. The hall was packed and all enjoyed the music furnished by Weisgerbers 6-piece orchestra.

RED TERROR STILL RAGES IN BULGARIA

Arms Caches are Seized in Sofia While Theatre and Library Burn at Plevna

COMMUNIST TURMOIL REIGNS

Brother of Slain General Arrested for Aiding and Harboring Conspirators

LONDON, April 25.—Communists have burned down the magnificent library and theatre at Plevna, Bulgaria, and a brother of General Georgiev has been arrested at Sofia for harboring Minkoff, reputed arch conspirator. These were the developments today in the Bulgarian situation according to dispatches received in London.

It was during the funeral of General Georgiev that 160 persons were killed by a bomb explosion. Minkoff was shot to death by police when discovered hiding.

Further ammunition caches in insurrections have been uncovered in Sofia, Burgas and Varna, according to other dispatches.

The public prosecutor of Sofia was said to have demanded a death penalty for the sexton of the church where the explosion occurred.

Charges of torture and massacre in Bulgaria were reiterated in London newspapers in statements by British parliament members, Wedgewood and Malone. The London "Times" correspondent in a dispatch from Sofia alleged that the Wedgewood and Malone charges were unfounded.

Only five hundred persons are under arrest in Sofia, the "Times" said it had been learned from official sources.

British Army To Hold 'War' Maneuvers

LONDON, April 24.—Army maneuvers will be carried out in September next for the first time since the war. An official statement issued from the war office announces that "it is unlikely that funds will permit of their being held annually on a similar scale." It adds that in view of this fact "it is especially desirable that the maneuvers should be as free from limitations (by landowners and farmers) as possible."

The maneuvers will take place in Hampshire and Wiltshire and in parts of Berkshire, Surrey, Sussex, Dorset, and the troops engaged will comprise four regular infantry brigades, one cavalry division, a force of tanks and dragons, and a number of squadrons of the Royal Air Force.

Maneuvers are authorized by the Military Manoeuvres Act, which is brought into operation by sanction of Parliament. The Act confers on the troops powers of passing and use of water supply practically anywhere throughout the area.

Church Fellowship Sponsors Big Show

A treat is in store for the people of Richmond when the Wright California Players, under the auspices of the Richmond church fellowship, present the great four-act drama, "In the Shadow of the Cross," at the Lincoln school auditorium at 8 o'clock on the evening of Monday, May 4. Tickets for this great drama can be secured at the various churches of Richmond and will be on sale at the door on the night of the entertainment.

California manufacturers produced $2,216,639,000 worth of manufactured products in 1923, gain of 26 per cent over 1921, according to figures of department of commerce.

CRIME NEWS

An Illinois newspaper classified its crime news and segregated it for a week on an inside page, and for another week placed it at the bottom of the front page clearly marked "crimes." The women's clubs who first suggested such an experiment are not satisfied with the result, and the ministers object to it. Sergeanting such news and making a definite department of it they say, calls too much attention to it.

"And why print crime news at all?" some of the reformers ask. To which a newspaper editor may fairly reply: "Why talk about crimes at all?"

The fact is that in any normal community, rightly or wrongly, people seem to be more interested in crime than anything else. Anyone on the streets and in the homes of Richmond yesterday had a vivid example of this. The whole subject of conversation yesterday was the execution of "tuffy" Reid at San Quentin, and the discussion of other famous crimes and criminals to which this subject led. Nothing will arouse so much conversation as a local crime, or a distant crime that stirs up deep seated human instincts and fears.

Perhaps it should not be so, but it is so. And whatever may be the ideal newspaper policy, no newspaper has yet succeeded by censoring life and giving its readers only such information as it thought they ought to be interested in.

There cannot be a crimeless paper for general readers—for cross-sections of society—until society stops committing crimes or refuses to read or talk about crimes. While crime exists, perhaps it is not only the inevitable policy but the wisest and bravest policy to face it frankly, report it clearly and let society know every day what has yet to be overcome in its struggle toward perfection.

JUNIOR HIGH JOURNALISTS

An educator has recently made a study of the "composition interests of junior high school pupils" as revealed in their school publications. Such publications are very common nowadays, and newspapers in some states are taking an active interest in them. Here are some of the things the educator discovered:

Wholesomeness of mind and high moral tone; simple style and mechanical correctness; variety of interests.

In relative importance, the chief place is assigned to school news; next, verse; third, jokes; fourth class news; fifth stories; sixth, social activities and moral issues; last, the informational essay. The investigator noted an almost complete lack of descriptive studies of persons or places or scenes, and of articles dealing with civics or politics or travel.

Somehow we don't worry about these commissions. It doesn't seem necessary for children of high school or junior high school rank to be writing world-saving articles on civics and politics. Although if these subjects are interestingly taught in school and adapted to the age and ability of the pupils the latter will show an amazing amount of interest in them.

LEGION ENDOWMENT FUND

No class will give more hearty support to the American Legion endowment fund than the Reserve Officers. This fund, needed to care for "those who gave the most" and their orphans, is a peculiar charge upon the leaders of the World war. Get into touch with your local legion post and put your shoulder to the wheel in this fine piece of work the legion is putting across. This burden belongs to every citizen in whose service these brave men gave their health and their lives.

In this great act the legion once more has exemplified its principles as set forth in the preamble to its constitution: "For God and Country, we associate ourselves together  to consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness."

A new election law in Egypt greatly restricts the right of suffrage by requiring both candidates and voters to fulfill certain educational and financial qualifications. Egypt is evidently getting as progressive as Virginia and South Carolina.

Over in Tunis they have dug up a child's bank containing a half a dozen copper coins, supposedly to be 2500 years old. Next thing we know they will find in their excavations, something showing when the first Bryan began running for office.

Pure White Is No Longer the Conventional Bridal Hue. Since Wedding Gowns Are Made of Gold or Silver, Pink, Blue, Orchid and Other Colors.

TINTED and colored wedding gowns are not the radical innovation that some persons seem to think them to be. They are merely a reversion to the styles of long ago, and there is excellent medieval precedent for such gorgeous bridal raiment. The modern notion until within a few years has been, of course, that if a girl had a formal wedding, with wedding veil and a formal wedding gown, then she had to be all in white. The only bit of color permitted was the green of the real or artificial orange blossoms. If she wanted to be married in anything but white, then she was married in what was known as a "fading away" gown.

Now only the most conservative folk insist on the all-white bridal gown, and even the conservative might approve of the new style if they but knew that there was such good medieval precedent for it. The custom has gained more ground in England, perhaps, than anywhere else, and there have been not a few examples among the English aristocracy. Among the tints and colors chosen have been green, rose or pink, blue and violet, silver and gold are likewise frequently chosen alone or in combination with one of the tints just listed.

The sketch shows a gown of recent making. It is of pale pink satin with slashed panels showing chiffon in the same shade. The gown is embroidered in pink beads and rhinestones and the panels are edged with a pink bead motif and the bride carries pink sweet peas. Following out the color scheme the gloves are of light pink suede. The sketch shows the detachable train—which falls from the shoulders—of chiffon appliqued with pink satin embroidered in beads and rhinestones. Leaving off this train, the gown becomes a quite wearable little dance or dinner gown.

The daughter of an English Lord who was married this spring chose a medieval wedding gown of gold tissue, with an old Brussels lace veil. Her bridesmaids, who were all children, were dressed in cherry red. The scene was one of medieval splendor and richness and has set the style since then for cherry-red bridesmaids' gowns.

With the all-white bridal gown bridesmaids' gowns may be of what color you please. Redfern of Paris has shown in recent display a wedding gown of white crepe satin with a train of tulle accompanied by bridesmaids' gowns in rose beige, trimmed with velvet ribbons of blue, and wide-brimmed hats.

WHERE IT STARTED

SPIC AND SPAN

This term, meaning perfect, originally meant "new" or "brand new." Cloth was formerly stretched on "spikes and spanners" hence new cloth was fresh from "spike and spanner" or spike-and-spanner new. Another derivation is nautical: "spike" meaning nail, and "span" or "spau" a chip; thus a ship was said to be "spiked-and-span" new; that is, every nail and bit of wood was new.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

By MARY MARSHALL

COLOR BY CANDLELIGHT

SOME women seem to follow the general rule never to wear bright colors save for evening or for very bright sunlight. For street wear and day-time wear generally save at the seashore or country, they choose dark or neutral tones. Thus there are French women of good taste who habitually choose black or navy blue or beige, according to the fashion, for day-time frocks and about Paris, who don bright and vivid colors for the months they spend at some seaside summer resort.

The fact is that in the cold penetrating light of our cities it is difficult to wear bright colors and still to look smart. This is especially true of older women.

But bright colors, it seems to be agreed, are well chosen for evening. Fortunately for those who like color, the evening frock of black or brown is far less usual now than a few seasons ago. Now we are told the most important thing to consider in an evening frock is the color.

One authority on such matters says that the woman with blue eyes should wear blue in the evening. Of course the blue-eyed woman would hardly be expected always to wear blue, but she should certainly not miss the opportunity of sometimes wearing a color that so becomes her, especially this season when the blue evening frock is so smart.

Silver and gold cloth seem to become almost every woman for evening wear. That is, some sort of metal cloth is found becoming. It is marvelously combined with other colors and is made now so that it does not tarnish. The stiff, heavy, easily tarnished metal cloth that we knew several years ago is a thing of the past.

Curious Will Divides Big British Fortune

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, April 24.—Under the will of the late Mr. Thomas Sharples, of Beech Road, Cheadle Hulme, Manchester, nearly the whole of a large fortune is left for the benefit of people named Sharples or Hesmondhalgh. Sharples, who was an accountant, and a bachelor, left $600,000. He bequeathed $1000 to his housekeeper, and ordered that a tombstone should be erected over the grave of himself and his brother Richard, at Mellor, Blackburn.

Subject to these provisions he left all of his property on trust for a "Thomas and Richard Sharples Charity Trust." He directed that the income should accumulate for three years after his death while a scheme was being prepared, and then the whole handed over to six trustees, "all of whom must be legally entitled to the surnames of Sharples or Hesmondhalgh."

WHO'S WHO AND WHAT'S HAPPENED

SALLY LEE, a public stenographer in a fashionable hotel took the place of a professional dancer who was injured, and danced for one day with JEROME, who is famous on two continents, just before leaving to marry TOM PORTER, a young real-estate salesman who is bitterly jealous of the dancer. She finds time heavy on her hands in their little apartment and wants to go back to work but he disapproves.

TODAY'S INSTALLMENT

VII—ESCAPADE

It was all very well that evening with Tom telling her how much he loved her and planning the little home in the suburbs they would have as soon as he put over a few big deals, but the next morning the same old situation confronted Sally.

What on earth would she do with all her spare time? She felt that she hadn't been just fair to Tom; she hadn't given this new life of hers a fair trial before asking to be allowed to do the things she had been accustomed to.

Rapidly she reviewed all the things she might do—things other wives did. She would make the living-room exciting, but that would have to be postponed until after the fifteenth of the month when Tom got paid. She would go calling—but all the people she knew were at work and wouldn't like even a momentary interruption. She would take long walks—bikes out in the country, perhaps—but the only shoes she had were pumps, her patent leather and her satin ones, and she couldn't afford to get those all stretched and worn even if they were comfortable enough to walk in, which they weren't.

Finally she decided that the best thing to do was to spend her spare time improving her mind. She couldn't join the circulating library just yet; that cost a dollar, and it was a quarter every time you exchanged a book. But she could go to the Public Library and on her way home she could walk up Madison Avenue and look in the shop windows. That didn't cost anything.

Sally dressed with as much care as though she had been going to a party. Her best silk stockings, the little hat she had worn that day she danced with Jerome, her best lace collar and cuff set.

"There," she said to her reflection reprovingly, "doesn't it seem nice for you not to look tired and harassed and like a poor working girl? But the reflection seemed to say something back about there being more satisfaction in happily-earned weariness than in rest at the price of boredom.

The subway was only half-filled; much nicer, she reflected than in the rush hours morning and night, and she was quite light-hearted and gay by the time she reached the library. There she wandered past shelf after shelf of books before she found any that interested her particularly. But finally clutching "The Art of the Dance," she took it and started to walk up the avenue looking in the windows.

Turning into Madison Avenue she felt a few scattered rain drops and cringed for fear of ruining the only presentable hat she had, she dodged into the nearest doorway—her own old hotel, the scene of many happy memories.

Just inside the door she heard a familiar voice say, "Hello. I wondered if I was never to see my little friend again."

She looked up and saw Jerome as handsome and sleek as ever smiling at her.

"How nice it is to see you again. We have all missed you around here. But I suppose a married woman is too busy to think about her old friends."

She glowed with pleasure at the warmth of his greeting and smiled as he glanced approvingly at the title of her book.

"Not too busy to come in for a cup of tea and a dance?" he asked, and Sally's heart pounded as he took her arm and guided her toward the palm room where laughter and the tinkle of china mingled with the crooning strains of the orchestra. What would Tom think of her!

As she entered the hotel she bumped into Jerome.

She was deliciously happy, yielding herself to the music and Jerome's gliding steps, as he talked to her of the book she had just brought from the library, of some pictures he had seen at an exhibition.

"Now that you have the time you must get about and see things," he told her. "You are young—beautifully young—and youth was meant for music and gaiety and finding all the beauty in the world. Come, you must meet my friend, Elliot Dane. You will enjoy dancing with him."

Sally did. It seemed to her that she had never before been so gloriously alive as when she was sliding and swaying to the music. And Elliot Dane, with whom Jerome left her when he went to find his partner for his exhibition dance, seemed to find nothing strange in the fact that she was there while her husband was working.

"Men must work and—" He started the quotation laughingly. "Women should weep." Sally finished it for him.

"No," he corrected her, "Women should dance."

It was almost five o'clock when Sally tore herself away after half an hour, using him that she would come to tea with him the following Friday. She must get home and get preparations for dinner started before Tom came home. She hadn't done anything wrong, but she was afraid to have Tom know where she had been.

1-1-2 cupfuls wheat flour
1-2 cupful chopped cooked ham

Put hominy into a bowl, add eggs well beaten, milk, salt, ham and baking powder sifted with flour. Beat thoroughly and drop by large spoonfuls into plenty of smoking hot fat. Fry until nicely browned, then drain on paper and serve hot.

Spinach and Egg: Boil 2 pounds of spinach in the usual way, squeeze quite dry, and then chop very finely, and cut two hard-boiled eggs in slices. Then well grease a pie dish and put first a layer of macaroni, grated cheese, and seasoning.

On this spread some spinach with a layer of hard boiled eggs. Repeat this; then pour milk, and cover with a thick layer of breadcrumbs and a little grated cheese. Put a few small pieces of butter on top, and bake for ten minutes in a quick oven. You will need 1-4 pound of cooked macaroni and one cup milk. Olive and Cheese:

1-2 cup minced olives.
1 neufchatel cheese.
1-4 cup finely cut celery.
1-2 cup finely chopped nut meats.
French dressing, parsley.
Cream the cheese, add olives and celery. Moisten with French dressing and shape into balls. Roll balls in finely cut nut meats or finely cut parsley. Arrange on lettuce leaves. Serve with French dressing.

COLD ASPARAGUS

Boil a bunch of asparagus in unsalted water for thirty minutes; then add a teaspoon of salt and cook until tender, but not mushy, perhaps ten or fifteen minutes. Drain carefully, so as not to break the stalks. Arrange on a platter and set in the ice box to cool. Just before serving, garnish the stalks just above the tips with a chopped relish, India or chutney. Cover the whole with French dressing and serve immediately.

Wedding gown of pale pink satin embroidered in pink beads and rhinestones. It is slashed at the lower edge to show a pink chiffon slip. The bride wears pink suede gloves and carries pink sweet peas. The white lace veil is held with beads. The train, of chiffon and embroidered satin, is shown at left.

"The Idol Dancer" at The Richmond

She was the most beautiful girl in all the group of islands, and yet no one thought her even fairly attractive because the standard was high and fat. Half French and half Chinese, with a foster father who never paid her a compliment, and not enough clothes to even cover her attention for half a day, she spent most of her time dancing, swimming and climbing the tall trees for coconuts. Nimble as a boy, she was strong and growing more beautiful every day.

The natives called her a sweet name meaning White Almond Blossoms but her foster father called her Mary, and as Mary the beachcomber knew her when he arrived with his little girl as his only asset, and as Mary the New England college boy knew her when he arrived, he thought she was wonderful, to meet so they wished to marry her. This Clarence Seymour as Mary became a very important figure in the story of "The Idol Dancer." David Wark Griffith's latest First National production now showing at the Richmond theatre.

Others in the cast include Richard Barthelmess, Creighton Hale, George McQuarrie, Anders Randolph, Florence Short, Porter Strong, Walter James and Kate Price.

Other features on the same program include "Dirty Hands," a juvenile comedy; "Kinograms," built like a newspaper.

Circus Elephants With Al. G. Barnes Show Here Tomorrow are Not Bothered by Prohibition Laws

WE SHOULD WORRY! "Prohibition don't worry us, so long as we can get lots of 'topical' material," trumpets these thirty elephants coming to Richmond Monday, April 27, with the Al. G. Barnes Big 4 Ring circus.

"Wonder how many buckets the elephant will drink today?" is the question every small boy who looks forward to carrying his water to the big show, wants to know.

Mr. Barnes has made it a whole lot easier for the kids this year, however, by employing water-tank wagons to tote the 'topical' to the pachyderms.

In addition to the elephants, the small boys may also have to carry water for Lotus, the largest and only blood-sweating vermicular hippopotamus in the world; after which they will have an opportunity of seeing the gigantic and newest circus feature, "Elephants at the Court of Queen Anne," the extravaganza that opens the big program this year. Three tribes of American Indians will be included in the cast, in addition to more than a hundred pretty girls from sun-kissed California, all of whom have appeared in some of the latest motion picture productions of the season.

And last, but not least, there will be the Giant Gorilla Man—Joe Martin, himself.

It's the show that's different every year.

Bad Arches New Cause for Divorce

By KARL H. von WIEGAND

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, April 25. Our feet are fast becoming weak and useless.

Whether they will become obsolete in the course of evolution, mere gray stones marking the site of a former activity along with the tonsils and appendix, is a moot question with at least one German scientist, Dr. Julius Levy.

Too much riding and too many quick changes in shoe styles are responsible for a perceptible weakening of the feet within the last decade, says the doctor. Naturally more women than men suffer from flat feet and all the other ills of the abused and unregarded members.

Fallen arches may be often even the cause of divorce the foot specialist believes. Women who wish to keep up with their husbands should be careful to keep their feet in training with special exercises night and morning. And by all means, they must wear large heavy shoes, with flat heels and strong ankles supports Dr. Levy advises, observing shoe styles from the useful rather than the esthetic point of view.

He tells of one case when speedy foot treatment saved a patient from the divorce courts. A woman hitherto accustomed to accompanying her mountain climber husband on his jaunts suddenly developed flat feet through wearing high heels.

After that she decided riding was better than walking and left her husband to take his hikes alone. Soon the wife began to complain about being left by herself so much.

She went to the chiropodist, listened to reason, exercised her feet and rescued them from their demure role. And presto a divorce was avoided.

Among other enemies working for the downfall of the foot in Germany is the weakening of the muscles and ligaments through years of improper diet and under-nourishment. However, Dr. Levy believes that by careful attention, much exercise and buying only made-to-measure shoes that the race may save their feet from becoming completely useless. He stresses shoes made strictly to measure, saying, "Did you ever

LOW INSURANCE ON MAXWELLS

A reduction of about 35 per cent in the fire and theft insurance rates on Maxwell cars, has just been made, according to an announcement given out yesterday by George Campe, Northern California Maxwell and Chrysler distributor.

"There are several outstanding reasons for this drop," said Mr. Campe, "particularly when the rates on a number of makes of cars have been increased. As a matter of fact many different makes of cars have doubled the Maxwell rate for fire and theft protection.

"The fire rates were decreased on Maxwell due to the fact that all electrical wiring is so thoroughly insulated and safeguarded against short circuiting. There is no chance for the car to catch fire because of poor wiring."

"The insurance companies have several important reasons for reducing the theft rate. In the first place there are several different places on the car where the identification numbers are indelibly stamped, making it practically impossible for thieves to obliterate all of them."

Men Like Greek Gods Is New Tailor Edict

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, April 24.—Tailors in Savile Row are convinced that the new tendency of fashion to cut men's coats on ampler lines is a recognition of an improvement national physique.

"Since the war," said a partner in a famous tailoring firm, "there has been a great national development in physique judged by the men who come to Savile Row."

"There are fewer round shoulders than ever. Most men who come here appear to be of the straight broad-backed type, revealing fullness of chest and width of shoulders."

"Men today have reverted more to the athletic figures characteristic of the Greeks of old, and to put the matter in a nutshell clothes nowadays go with the men instead of the man with the clothes."

COACHES LOWER THAN OPEN CAR

With a production of 1,000 Hudson and Essex cars a day, the Hudson Motor Car Co., has advanced to a position of undisputed leadership among all six cylinder manufacturers, according to J. P. Strom, local Hudson-Essex dealer.

"For a period of several months," he said, "Hudson-Essex has gained rapidly, and is at the present time making several hundred more six cylinder cars than anyone else in the business. This leadership is all the more striking because the Hudson-Essex business is concentrated 90 per cent on the two coaches, and there are only six models in the whole Hudson-Essex line, as against some twenty odd in the lines made by other volume six builders."

"There is one open and one closed Essex type of car, and one Hudson open car, the coach, and two sedans, one in the five and the other in the seven-passenger size. It is this specialization that has enabled Hudson-Essex to offer its coaches at actually lower than the open cars—the only such case in the industry."

Ford's New French Factory to Answer Ban on Imports

By BASIL WOON

PARIS, April 24.—As a retort to a French proposal to forbid the importation of American automobiles Henry Ford is planning to build a big factory near Paris for the construction of Ford and Lincoln cars and tractors, it is reported here.

According to the report Ford has taken an option on a large tract of ground near Issy, four miles from Paris.

Importation of American cars has increased considerably of recent years. Whereas only 3,231 chassis of a value of 64 million francs were imported in 1922, the total for last year was 12,834 chassis valued at 79 millions. This despite the present ad valorem tax on American chassis of 45 per cent.

On the other hand exportation of French-built cars has increased considerably. From 17,837 chassis, valued at 556 millions, exported in 1922, the total passed last year to 48,127 chassis valued at 1,512,000,000 francs. In 1913 the number of automobiles of all kinds taxed in France was 90,000. In 1920 the total was 233,000.

Workless Boys and Girls Big Problem

(By Universal Service)

LONDON, April 24.—The grave national danger arising from an army of unemployed boys and girls who leave school merely to wander about the streets was the subject of an important debate in the House of Lords.

The Bishop of Southwark raised the matter by calling attention to "the demoralization which results from juvenile unemployment," and asking the Government how it was proposed to deal with the problem.

It was very difficult, he said, to estimate the number of juveniles between the ages of fourteen and eighteen who were out of work. The number registered was 70,000, but that did not represent the total. In London alone there were 14,000 boys and girls between fourteen and sixteen who wanted work and could not get it.

Deploring as a real disaster the fact that so few boys were apprenticed, he declared that the number of juvenile out of work was some thing like 200,000.

Unemployment was not the only evil he dealt with. Out of the boys and girls who left school two years ago, he said, 87 per cent, had received no further education.

"Many of them," he added, "live in appalling conditions of overcrowding, and have to wander about the streets. After some months a boy who has left school full of hope and enthusiasm becomes a prematurely old and disappointed man. Many become bitter in their hearts against all government and society. I should like to see a grievance against the world."

Figures Criticized

Lord Peel, for the Government, announced that the question of the registration of juveniles between fourteen and sixteen was now under consideration. At present, he said, there were 65,921 boys and girls between fourteen and eighteen registered as unemployed. He disagreed with the bishop's figures, giving as "a rough estimate" a total of 98,881 boys and girls unemployed. The totally employed, he said, numbered about 2,250,000, so that the unemployed represented about 4 1/2 per cent.

Lord Balfour took a characteristic view. He wanted boys and girls taught a trade and allowed to leave school even earlier. Increased trade was his general remedy. "We ought also to encourage," he said, "the object lesson on how to live on nothing given by fathers and mothers who take the dole."

ENCLOSED CARS GAIN IN FAVOR

"The solid comfort that is being derived by owners driving coach models is a real indication that there will be a continued sales increase for this type of car during the summer months," says C. C. Kratzer, local Buick dealer.

"People who prior to the introduction of the coach job were owners of open models are now driving enclosed cars. This means that these people will carry the message of the advantages of the coach to their friends who are contemplating the purchase of an automobile and the result will be a big summer business on closed cars."

Last year the number of automobiles in France approximated 600,000, making one automobile for every 65 persons.

In a chat I had with Baron de Charron, well-known automobile constructor, he gave it his opinion that French constructors would this year make approximately 200,000 automobiles.

SILENT ROOM TESTS GEARS

One of the many interesting tests carried out by the Chrysler Motor company in manufacturing Chrysler cars is the "silent test" of clutch and transmission gears, says George Campe, Northern California distributor for Chrysler and Maxwell cars.

"A special room has been fitted up for the purpose," said Campe. "It is known as the 'silent room' and is so constructed and insulated that factory noises are entirely shut out, and only those noises created in the room itself can be heard."

"In the first place Chrysler transmission gears are carefully machined and matched before being assembled into the transmission. Then the transmissions are placed on the test stand and driven by an electric motor, which is mounted outside so that even the hum of the motor cannot be heard."

pairment of the years around forty. Just count yourself among the young. Don't admit you are getting tired, or old, and your body will obey your will and keep its elasticity."

The sex urge has little to do with the sudden eccentricities of the contrary. Coming from the hot bed of Viennese specialists who lay all stress on sex, Doctor Schulhoff's declaration was inconceivable, and seemed to distress and puzzle his rapt hearers.

Amorous escapades are not more common for the man or woman who has reached the half way stage in life than at any other time. But Schulhoff admitted that a greater proportion of men were more likely to fall victims to folly that the reputedly restless women.

Women Told of Dangerous Age

By KARL H. von WEIGAND

(By Universal Service)

BERLIN, April 24.—That "dangerous age" forty, has lost its sting.

A crowd of eager women gathered in Vienna to hear the latest word on the trials of being forty from Doctor Adolph Schulhoff were disappointed to find that most of their troubles are imaginary. There isn't much to the contention that forty is a dangerous age for women, the specialist told his audience.

Men of that age are apt to act more foolishly than women. But there isn't any scientific reason why either sex should regard that fatal forty as anything to fear.

"Just stay young gracefully" was the doctor's admonition. "If you want to fight off the slight physical im-
